Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 16 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mostly dry and cloudy; some sunshine in a few places.

Today:
Patchy fog in eastern areas of England may be slow to clear but with a little sunshine eventually. Many other areas cloudy and mostly dry but some rain in the far north. Still mild for most, breezy in north.

Tonight:
Clear spells likely in places, especially northeast England and Scotland, with some patches of frost and fog likely to form. Many southern areas remaining cloudy and fairly mild.

Friday:
Fog patches in the north may be slow to clear, this most likely northeast England. Some sunshine for Scotland. Mostly cloudy skies further south, and a little less mild.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Dry, mostly cloudy period, the exception being parts of Scotland which are likely to see more in the way of sunny spells. Winds largely light and variable. Becoming rather cold.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.